Shultz, Lebanese Disagree Over Chances for Early Pact

By John M. Goshko Washington Past Service

BEIRUT - U.S. Secretary of State George P. Sbultz said Tuesday that agreement on Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon could be near, but Foreign Minister Elie Salem of Lebanon immediately expressed doubt that accord would be reached this week as Mr. Shultz.

Mr. Salem, who conferred Mon-day with President Hafez al-Assad of Syria, left the impression that Syria has put heavy new pressure on Lebanon not to make the con-cessions required by Mr. Shultz to win Israel's agreement to with-

Stressing repeatedly that Leba-non will never do anything to compromise the security of Syria, Mr. Salem also spoke of the need for Lebanon to "consult with the rest of the Arah world" about any accord with Israel and asserted.
"an agreement is not at hand."

His words were a reminder that Syria, which bas about 40,000 troops in northern and eastern Lebanon, can override Mr. Shultz's efforts by refusing to pull out its troops and those of the Palestine Liberation Organization that still remain io Lebanon under Syrian was not immediately clear whether Mr. Salem, who spoke before television cameras, was making a bow toward Syrian sensibilities or whether his words were a sign of new hitches in the talks that Mr. Shultz has been conducting between Israel and Lebanon.

However, there clearly was a considerable gap between the opti-mism voiced by Mr. Shultz as he arrived Tuesday after a marathon negotiating session Monday in Israel and the downbear rhetoric

On Monday, U.S. officials said Shultz was hoping to wrap up an Israeli-Lebanese accord in time for him to confer with Mr. Assad in Damascus and possibly other Arab leaders, such as King Hussein of Jordan and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, before going to Paris this weekend for an economic meeting.

any withdrawal agreement unless Shultz immediately plunged into talks with Lebanese negotiators about proposals he had worked out with the Israelis for resolving some differences. The talks continued into the night, and Mr. Shultz abandoned plans to return to Jerusalem Tuesday evening.

After the talks had been going on for several hours, Mr. Salem emerged and was immediately be-sieged by questions about his talks with Mr. Assad. Reports from Damascus have said the Syrians warned him that they would not withdraw from Lebanon if the pro-posed agreement allows Israel "to

For Shultz, a Fistful of Problems Flap on Jets Unmasks Issues Beyond Israeli Pullout

By Edward Walsh

JERUSALEM - There was a flurry of press reports here Mon-day that while Secretary of State George P. Shultz has been shuttling between Jerusalem and Beirut, Defense Secretary Caspar TW. Weinberger, who in Israeli eyes is the pre-eminent villain of the Reagan administration, was up to no good back in Washington. The reports, which emanated from the Israeli Defense Ministry, held that Mr. Weinberger had blocked implementation of an administration decision to release U.S technological information needed by Israel to construct the ter Moshe Arens.

By the end of the day the flap appeared to have died out. U.S. officials characterized the Israeli press accounts as "behind the curve" and said the technology would be delivered to Israel as announced two weeks ago. (In Washington, the State Department spokesman, Alan D. Romberg, said licenses for export of the technology had been amended last week because of discussions with Israeli officials and the companies involved. "We believe we have oow met the requests put to us by the Israelis," Mr. Romberg

U.S. Catholic Prelates Set to Vote on A-Arms

CHICAGO — The American Catholic bishops headed Tuesday for a showdown with the Reagan administration as they prepared to vote on a pastoral letter calling for an outright halt to the nuclear arms race.

After weeks of debate, the bishops Monday overwhelmingly approved a draft version of the letter that urged a "halt" rather than a "curb" to the nuclear arms race and said "it was morally unjustified to initiate nuclear war in any form."

Both positions, if approved in a formal vote by about 275 bishops at a national conference in Chicago, would represent a rebuil to administration policy and could put the church in the forefront of the nuclear freeze movement.

To become official, the letter would need 192 votes. If approved, the 155-page letter would become a guide for church The White House declined comment on the preliminary vote, saying it would await the final result. The administration has sought a bolstering of U.S. nuclear defenses and has refused to disavow a first use of atomic weapons in a war. It contends that such an option is needed to deter an all-out

Sweden Searching for Alien Sub

STOCKHOLM (AP) - Swedish ships and helicoptess searched Tuesday for at least one foreign submarine off the northern coast and possibly another off the western coast, military officials said.

Last week, Sweden accessed the Soviet Union of sending six submarines into Swedish waters in October and warned that the next intruder would be destroyed.

Meanwhile, Erik Senstad, spokesman for the Norwegian Defense Ministry, said Tuesday in Stavanger that the Norwegian Navy had called off its seven-day hunt for possible foreign submarines believed to have intruded into Norway's territorial waters.

A search has been under way in Norway since Wednesday after two former navy divers said that they spotted a submarine in the Hardangerfjord. Mr. Senstad said that the search was called off because there had been no new indications of foreign submarines in the search area in

Miss Kings said the peace groups are seeking to put pressure on commercial targets by boycotting their products, blockading their factories and holding protest demonstrations and letter campaigns.

Among the first targets will be the Tarmac Company, one of Britain's biggest house builders, which is constructing silos for 96 Tomahawk cruise missiles west of London. The British group also cited Man-VW, a West German truck-building company that makes cruise launch vehicles.

Assad, Arafat Meet in Damascus

DAMASCUS (AP) - President Hafez al-Assad of Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization chief, Yasser Arafat, met Tuesday and re-solved problems in Syrian-PLO relations, a PLO spokesman said. "We consider the strain over." Mr. Arafat's deputy, Khalil Wazir, also known as Abu Jihad, said after the meeting in the presidential palace. The strain developed after Israel's invasion of Lebanon last summer, which forced the PLO to evacuate Beirut and Syria to regroup its forces in castern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley. Mr. Wazir said Syria and the PLO had agreed to coordinate their military resources to face what he called the "Israeli buildup and the Israeli threats that have reached their peak" in the Bekaa Valley. It was the first meeting between Mr. Arafat and Mr. Assad in eight months.

As the Senate began a week of debate on the budget, the 54 mem-bers of the Republican majority failed, in two meetings Monday, to nail down a party line on the tax-and-spending blueprint the Budget Committee approved last month. But the chairman of the committee, Senator Pete V. pass a package of their own. Several Republican senators indicated they could not support the budget revision package. Some also questioned whether modifications would allow them to pick up the necessary votes.

To get a budget out of the severely split Budget Committee, Mr. Domenici and other Republicans had to make major concessions to the Democrats, such as agreeing to $30 billion in new taxes next year. They can shake free of these if 51 Republicans can agree on an alter-

The government had answered with threats and maneuvers. On the day, Solidarity supporters gathered at Mass, the only setting where the government dares not bar their gathering, and then unfurled their banners. When the crowds refused to disband, the police used tear gas, water boses and clubs.

What is so impressive to outsiders is not simply the readiness of thousands of Poles to stand up to official power in a communist country. It takes a special kind of courage to be willing to keep at protest in the face of the seductive argument that protest is not only dangerous but counterproductive, that it will draw further repression, while cooperation will be better for everyone.

Helping the Schools

The National Commission on Excellence in Education may dwell too obviously on the link between national security and good schools. And it may have unfairly ignored many good things the nation's educators are doing. But who can deny that public education's lost credibility creates a crisis for too many American communities — or that efforts to remedy the problem are nowhere in sight?

America has lost sight of the purposes of schooling, the commission says. Expectations and discipline have faded. About 13 percent of all 17-year-olds are functionally illiterate. Student achievement in almost every area has been declining steadily.

Besides calling for better standards, training and pay for teachers, the commission urges four years of high school English, three of math, science and social science, and a semester of computer science. It would also tighten testing standards and lengthen the school day and year.

Poor schooling threatens the nation's ability to compete in world markets and to adapt to new technology, the report says, while poor skills and literacy of minority groups limit their participation in national life.

The commission bolds no monopoly on such sentiments. Yoshi Tsurumi, who teaches marketing at Baruch College, writes that when more than half of graduate and undergraduate students in business and economics in the United States have mathematical and scientific skills equivalent to Japanese students in grade 8 or 9, "this is tantamount to unilateral economic disarmament on the part of the U.S." Meanwhile, a New York youth, reacting to the commission's report, says, "Young people already dislike school, and they are going to make us hate it more." The crisis is inflamed by conditions the commission fails to address. Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, has urged his members to support longer school hours for more pay.

But real progress would also require that teachers' unions put education goals above work rules, that teaching colleges improve their own admission and instruction standards and that the public provide school systems with more tax revenues.

Overcoming these impediments requires strong national leadership. Instead of exerting it, President Ronald Reagan blames the federal government for harming education. "We'll continue to work for tuition tax credits, vouchers, voluntary school prayer and abolishing the Department of Education" was his frail response to this candid challenge.

The Generous Mr. B

George Balanchine, fgor Stravinsky and Pa-blo Picasso shared a remarkable century and a remarkable distinction: None of them was e.er compared to anyone else. They were clearly hors concours. Last week the last of the trio, Mr. Balanchine, died at 79.

Like his great peers, he had continued to create as long as possible. "I think," he once said, discussing Don Quixote, "that ... everything a man does, he does for his ideal woman. You bve only one life and you believe in something, and I believe in that." Mr. Balanchine's Dulcinea was, of course, ballet something, as he said of the don's pursuit, "to live for and sacrifice and serve."

As a choreographer and as co-founder and artistic director of the New York City Ballet, Mr. Balanchine contributed volumes to the history of dance. But there is a simple word ous with his treasures. for his greatest contribution: delight.

Ballets by Mr. Balanchine have delighted people everywhere, but none were more de-lighted than those who used to gather at the "old" City Center - the Mecca Auditorium on West 55th Street in Manhattan. The stage was not perfect but the prices were, and the audience, being regulars, thought of their seat-mates as friends,

In 16 years, from 1948 to 1964, they were introduced to "Agon," "Ivesiana," "Stars and Stripes," "Episodes" and "Allegro Brillante" - each of them an invitation, Mr. Balanchine said, to "see the music and hear the dance." A small group, they considered themselves the luckiest people in the world.

Today, people lucky enough to know Mr. Balanchine's work are numbered in the milbons. What a rich man he was, and how gener-

Solidarity Lives

As spectacular as it was, the declaration of martial law in Poland represented only a moment in a long and complex crisis, not its final close - as was verified Sunday with the success of Solidarity's demonstrations.

It was an important moment, however, because General Jaruzelski managed, 17 months ago, to completely overturn the existing balance of forces. But this reversal of the situation did not stop there. Just as Solidarity could not hope to overturn a regime enjoying the vigilant protection of the Soviet Union. General Jaruzelski cannot, as the Polish primate [Archbishop Jozef Glemp] said Sunday, reduce ideas to nothing through administrative decisions.

The paradox of the situation that has existed since Dec. 13, 1981, is not only that Solidarity, strengthened by the popularity of its ideals, has not disappeared, but that the martial law regime, to stand a chance of succeeding, must limit itself; it must not fully unleash its absolute, but unwieldy power.

It is reassuring, for the sake of peace in Europe, that the Polish authorities seem at times to understand that. But this merely underscores the fact that, more than ever, they are closing their eyes to the logical conclusion: the need for a compromise with Solidarity. - Le Monde (Paris).

Sunday's demonstration proves beyond doubt that the spirit behind the birth of Solidarity in August 1980 lives and is as strong as ever. For every citizen who marched on Sun-day there would have been tens or scores more giving support in their hearts. Despite his sneering remarks about a "pitiful tringe," General Jaruzelski must know that his military government has failed to win acceptance.

What is at stake remains the same as it has been from the beginning, the retention of power by the Communist apparatus. To negotiate with a body outside that apparatus would be to admit that it has broken down.

Poland then, continues to light up the di-lemma in which the whole communist world finds itself. If the Poles could find an answer, they would be performing a very great service. - The Daily Telegraph (London).

1908: Farm Strike in Parma

ROME — The great agricultural strike that has been imminent for some time in the prov-ince of Parma was proclaimed yesterday. For-ty thousand men ceased to work. The strikers wish to force the landed proprietors to capitu-late by preventing all work. The latter, and the men who are willing to work, declare that they will continue work in spite of the efforts of the strikers' league. The women strikers show themselves more fanatical even than the men. They surround the stables and cow houses and refuse to allow the animals to be taken to pasture. When the cavalry arrive to disperse the crowds the women and children be down so that the soldiers cannot charge.

1933: Berlin Takes Over Unions

BERLIN - Following the seizure by Nazi storm troops of all the offices and property of the Federation of Socialist Trade Unions, the last Marxist stronghold in Germany, two Na-tional-Socialists have been appointed state commissars to fuse the trade unions with official unions. Other non-Socialist trade unions will also voluntarily place themselves under governmental control so that by May 10, when the Labor Congress will meet, all German workers will be under Hitlerite guidance. In another development, Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda and enlightenment, announced be will visit America in June to represent Germany at the Chicago World Fair.

Not least is its peroration, a call to Americans "to see ourselves, in dealing with these issues, not as political partisans or as crusaders for one

First is the appeal for bipartisanship and a basic national consensus. For too long now, the arcane issues of nuclear strategy have been allowed to spark a virtual war of religion between less, costly zigzags to achieve them.

But first the bad news. The commission, led by Brent Scowcroft, who was President Gerald Ford's national security adviser, recommends stuffing 100 MX missiles, each with 10 warheads, into existing Minuteman silos. Its mandate, after all, was only to recommend the best counts, peace and defense, Second is the firm emphasis on arms control would be an adequate hedge.

The report does undermine the frantic "window of vulnerability" theory on which MX was based. The existing U.S. air., land- and seabased deterrent will be reliable long enough, even if the Russians have tested two new missiles, instead of the one permitted under the SALT-2 treaty, which the Senate never ratified.

The Congress can separate out MX from the commission's highly constructive proposals and launch the United States on a more rational defeater the commission. defense program.

There are crucial elements:

The freeze movement is a natural response to the spend-the-Russians-down-the-dram idea. The dispute enfeebles the United States and worries allies about U.S. reliability on both second is the firm emphasis on arms control as essential to finine security. There is no guarantee that workable agreements can be reached with Moscow, But the report points out that American arms programs must be planned in a way that will belp make accords possible, not more elucium. more chusive.

This, too, would be reassuring to both the American public and to the United States's Third is a series of concrete suggestions on how to proceed. The "vulnerability" problem has emerged as a direct result of putting more and more warheads on fewer but bigger missiles. It is the dreadful fruit of the 1960s decision to go for MIRV (multiple independently targetable re-ence fiction turns to fact and new technologists develop a gleam in the eye about victory in space wars. What happened with MIRVs is that more weapons are now available to overwhelm fewer argets, increasing the risk.

So the report endorses a reversal to "Midget-man," smaller missiles with only one warhead that can be dispersed to make it harder to knock them out in one massive sneak attack, and smaller submarines that will be harder to find. This is real deterrence without threat.

It is also good logic, and it holds on its own terms for the Russians as well as for the United States. So it enhances the chance of getting agreements that will lead to cutting arsenals, and costs, on both sides.

That will require revising the U.S. proposal at the Geneva talks on strategic arms reduction (known as START), to set limits in terms of equal numbers of warheads rather than launchers. This would make it attractive for Moscow to follow an American move away from MIRV.

Experts say there is a better chance for a START accord now, if the United States is willing to move on numbers, than for one in the separate Euromissile talks.

Nothing would ease Europe's tense political dilemma with the Pershing-2 and cruise missiles more than some real progress on START. It would be a convincing demonstration that the United States is serious about arms control, a judgment now widely doubted underlying problems are domestic.

In dealing with the hostility in action should be framed within the Central America, our group recommended dialogues: between the gov-ernments in El Salvador, Guatemala and Nicaragua and the respective opposition movements in those coun-tries; between Nicaragua and each of its neighbors; between Cuba and all the countries of Central America; between the United States and Cuba and the United States and Nicaragna respectively; and between the United States and the Soviet Union. Colombia. Mexico. Panama and Venezuela have offered to join in the talks.

For Latin America, this approach would reinforce the tradition of self-determination and nonintervention. For the United States, it would help meet the central seeming goal of im-iting the most threatening forms of Soviet and Cuban activity, including both strategic and conventional mili-tary presences. Cuba, Nicaragua and Grenada would gain some assurance that they would not be the objects of external destabilization efforts, provided they refrain from similar activi-ties. And Cuba would achieve the recognition it seeks.

Muzzling Evil, and Arbatov

By Philip Geyelin

WASHINGTON - Georgi A.
Arbatov is the head of Moscow's institute of U.S. and Canadian Studies. He is considered by most students of the subject to be the Soviet Union's best authority on the United States and an influential figore in the Kremlin.

So when Mr. Arbatov talks, people histen — American officials, academics, news commentators. They listen not so much because they believe what he has to say, but because what he has to say is generally taken to be what the Soviet Union would have us believe is the official Soviet line at

There was, therefore, a large turn-out of distinguished figures from the State Department, congressional committee staffs, academia, leading local think-tanks, television and the writing press when Mr. Arbatov spoke at a recent dinner discussion hosted by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

But there was one oddity, wryly taken note of by Mr. Arbatov. The presence of reporters and columnists came close to contravening a restric-tion imposed upon him by State Department order.

Mr. Arbatov's latest American tour is at the invitation of Grinnell College in Iowa and the Dartmouth Conference, a private symposium on U.S.-Soviet affairs. He has lectured to public gatherings of more than 1,000 people. Although he canceled one news conference, he did give in-terviews to the Des Moines Register and Iowa public television.

But even these strictly local media contacts, according to a State De-partment press officer, were "con-trary to the purposes for which his visa had been issued."

How petty can you get? More precisely, to what lengths — or depths — is the Reagan administration prepared to go to preserve the purity of American public discourse in its crusade against the "evil" of interestical committee. ternational communism? One would have thought that a nadir had been reached with the denial of an entry visa to the 68-year-old widow of Sal-vador Allende, because of her mem-bership in the World Peace Council, which, the State Department said, has Soviet Communist ties.

For her to come to the United States on the invitation of the Roman Catholic archdiocese in San Francisco, Stanford University and the Northern California Ecumenical Council, it was judged, would have been "prejudicial to the public interest" and could endanger the "safety or security of the United States" under terms of immigration law.

As silly as that may sound, the Arbatov case strikes me as even sillier. For one thing, thanks to modern communications, he can be (and has been) bounced off a satellite from Moscow to American television screens, for which he needs no visa.

For another, his public lectures and private discussions on his recent tour gave him ample opportunity to press the Soviet line.

So what, exactly, is the rationale for the minor inconvenience, loosely enforced, of a State Department edict against "any contact with the media? It is an issue of principle, officials insist. The recently enacted Foreign Missions Act is designed to promote reciprocity in the treatment of American diplomats on matters having to do with travel restrictions, the location or protection of embassies, communications, immunity. The Reagan administration believes its terms should apply, as well, to access to the media. Our ambassador's pronouncements go unreported in the Soviet Union. So, tit-for-tat, we will nuzzle Mr. Arbatov. Now reciprocity has its uses in some instances having to do not only with U.S. missions abroad but with treatment of American citizens or news representatives. The Russians care, for example, if we throw out their Izvestia correspondent in retali-ation for the expulsion of an American correspondent.

But the United States cannot block Soviet access to an American free press. So there is no way to apply everage, and still less point in trying. For what we are demanding is that the Soviet Union have a free press— that is, an open society. And that, in turn, is to say that the Soviet peoples should stop being communists.

Hope of a Visit

Regarding "Psychiatrists Back Probe of Sovier" (IHT, April 26): I was quoted in this Associated Press dispatch on psychiatric abuse as saying I did not expect the Russians to agree to a visit by an international group of psychiatrists to examine alleged victims.

I would like to point out that, whereas the Soviet Psychiatrists' Association has been negative on the issue of psychiatric abuse over the last six years, the situation created by its withdrawal from the World Psychiatric Association may allow some hope for a change of policy.

Therefore, the visit of an international delegation of psychiatrists, as suggested by the Russians themselves iast October, may have a chance of being accepted.

China Envoy Asserts U.S. Distorts Pact

By Richard Bernstein New York Times Service

NEW YORK - China's ambassador to the United States has accused the Reagan administration of "twisting the meaning" of the communique signed last August that limits American arms sales to

"Hardly had the ink on the communiqué dried when the U.S. government announced a projected level of its arms sales to Taiwan for fiscal 1983 and 1984, which far exceeds the level of recent years," the Chinese ambassador, Zhang Wen-"To make matters worse," Mr.

Zhang said, "in its public state-ments the U.S. side often twists the meaning of the communique, insisting that the U.S. shall keep up pursuing its present policy of selling arms to Taiwan so long as Taiwan's reunification with the motherland has not materialized."

Estradiol's potency is measured in picograms (trillionths of a gram). In men, estradiol is usually present in about 30 picograms per nilliliter of blood, an amount that is about two-hundreths that of testosterone.

Estradiol and testosterone are similar compounds except for a change in a type of chemical bonding known as aromatization in one of the component rings of estra-diol. Estradiol like other estrogens, is aromatized. Most estradiol in men is produced in muscle and fat cells from testosterone by aromatization. Smaller amounts of estra-

MELBOURNE - An Australian research team has announced that a woman, now in her 14th week of pregnancy, was implanted with an embryo that had been frozen for four months.

The research team announced the experiment Monday and said all tests showed the fetus was healthy. The woman was impregnated with one of her own eggs fertilized by her husband, said Dr. Alan Trounson. He is scientific director of the research team at Monash University's infertility unit and Melbourne's Epworth Hospital, where the implantation was performed late last year.

" He said the woman was infertile because both ber Fallopian tubes were blocked.

Dr. Trounson, claiming a "world breakthrough," said that the team recognized the legal and ethical questions involved and that its work is monitored closely by an ethics committee at Monash Uni-versity's Queen Victoria Medical

The research team removed four eggs from the woman and fertilized them using a technique pioneered by team members. Dr. Trounson said. ### Temple Fielding: Taking a New Route

By Edwin McDowell New York Times Service

TEW YORK — "The wings on our feet are awfully tattered from hard use and so oow we're going to take them off and have them dry cleaned," said Temple Fielding, speaking for himself and Nancy, his wife and traveling partner of almost 4! years. Having sold Fielding Publications in February for an undis-closed sum in William Morrow & Co., with whom they had been associated for more than 30 years, the Fieldings will now have time to iodulge their every ethereal or indolent whim. Right now they simply want to stay put after 35 years of crisscrossing Europe, staying in everything from flea bags to rooms fit for a king, checking out expensive nightclubs and sleazy hars, eating in gourmet restaurants and in dives that give greasy spoons a bad

Their findings appear between the covers of Fielding's Travel Guide to Europe," an annual that has grown from 60,000 words in 1948 in about a millioo today. By assuring reluctant Americans that postwar Europe was not only safe bot comfortable, and by convincing them they did out need to know a foreign language to enjoy those comforts, the book did for European tourism approximately what the Marshall Plan did for European industry. Still going strong after 36 years, the various editions of the book, 15 to 20 percent of which is updated each year, have sold more than 3 million copies.

Since 1951 the Fieldings have lived on the Mediterranean island of Majorca, most of that time in splendor at Villa Fielding, a moun-taintop estate in the beach resort of Formentor. "But the house got too big for just the two of us so about a year ago we put it up for sale and moved into a penthouse in Palma. the capital," said the Bronx-born Fielding, 69, during a recent tele-phone cooversation. But it is the basic travel guide occasionally witty, often corny and ever opinionated — that inspired readers. Edition after edition, including 1983, has proclaimed that, "Our primary obsession is to be accepted as Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, routine American tourists, who apparently speak oothing but who are typically easygoing, and who might be somewhat baffled by it all (which is often too

That statement of purpose struck a responsive chord in many Americans, with the result that each summer for several decades armies of preoccupation from the United States have fanned out across Europe determinedly clutching Fielding travel guides. The guidesters had faith in his assurances - attested to by others - that neither he oor his staff ever accepted payola, commissions, rake-offs or kickbacks. And they were impressed by statements of the kind made in the 1983 guide instant and fierce loyalties from that "we spent $157,793.82 last year" — up from the $63,714.18 claimed in 1970 — "in travel and operating expenses."

> Despite the author's editorial independence and eye for detail, however, the guide, especially the early editions, has been accused of various shortcomings, principally that in giving more space to shopping and the whereabouts of ladies of the evening than to the Louvre or the Prado, it was snobbish in its evaluation of creature comforts and lowbrow in its cultural tastes.

The pace was unhurried, but coherent. All the haunting solos for the winds were lovingly shaped. The opera unfolded with the naturalness of an old legend narrated by a storyteller.

The singing unfortunately, was oot absolutely first-class and in particular the tenor Wolfgang Neu-mann, in the title role, was not always pleasant to hear. The voice is large, but curiously constricted and he had a tendency to scoop and lose pitch. In the second act, Hermann Prey, the Wolfram, also strayed from correct intonation now and then; but for the most part he produced beautiful sounds and an affecting, warm interpretation. > final, classic moments of Che-khov's "Cherry Orchard," with firs locked up in the house as Ranevska departs for Moscow, and the trees start coming down, and then have Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson come in through the window to start putting the mystery in its proper perspective. Why exactly has the orchard been sold? How did Lopakin happen oo his myste-rious fortune? Has there already been at least one murder and not, why not?

The fact that even Holmes and Watson are masquerading as Spade and Beckett gives you some notion of the number of literary jokes that are at work here, and the fact that later Holmes feels obliged to come hack on dressed as Rasputin on speed gives you some further no-non of the approximate historic and scholastic period. But what wrong here is actually the reverse of what goes wrong in "Dai-sy,". Where that school play failed to escape its own boundaries and give us any comment on the chil-dren who would one day inherit Downing Street, this hugely intricate and scholarly prank fires off on so many levels that we end up shell-shocked and not much the

The notion of these cloistered, self-absorbed Chekhovian arche-types being suddenly subjected to the examination of a couple of Victorian English detectives is masterly: the problem is that the conven-tions of a Holmesian thriller are so strict that more and more time has to be given over to the actual mystery of the plot and less and less to the satire we have come to expect. A strong cast under Michell's own direction gets all the laughs it can. but something seems to have ex-ploded inwardly here, so that by the end of the evening the fragments of about half a dozen possihle plays are being swept all over

Finally to the Ambassadors from an initial season last summer out at the Watermili in Newbury, has come Wendy Toye's production of "This Thing Called Love," a courageous attempt to get us back into that dear departed world of intimate revue. She has a lot going for her here and least David Karran her here, not least David Kernan, who, as far and away the best who, as far and away the best Sondheim singer in this country, is suitably enough given some new material from the as yet inseen "Merily We Roll Along." Then we have John Moffatt doing some superlative Betjeman, Jennie Linden proving that she's a singer as well as an enchanting actress, and Anna Dawson still banging out some old numbers.

But what we get is a team of good character actors in search of a show: By ransacking songs poems, sketches, letters and jokes from roughly a hundred authors (rang-ing from Shakespeare to Jilly Cooper, and ranges don't range much further than that) the team has come up with a kind of grab-bag inside which are a few treasures, as well as, inevitably, a certain amount of old rubbish. The result is not unlike an Oxford Dictionary of Quotations interrupted by the Hundred Best Tunes. It would have worked better had they settled for a single author, composer, lyricist or even poet.

Jackson Clarion-Ledger, Once Synonymous With Racism, Wins Pulitzer Prize, but Its Crusading Hero Is Absent

By Bill Prochnau

Faulknerian Fashion

But in classic, almost Faulknerian Southern fashion, there was almost as much poignancy as triumph. Many of the tears were flowing for a man who was not there, the enigmatic and char-ismatic young heir apparent who had battled history, tradition and his own family to change the newspaper's course.

The story of the Clarion-Ledger's Pulitzer nor said Prize is the story of Rea Hederman, the scion of a family whose tentacles reached out from Jackson's two newspapers into landlording, racist politics and virtual control of a state that still

To understand the Clarion-Ledger story is to understand the Hederman family story, a tale that begins early in the century when two hardworking, tectotaling brothers arrived here in a wagen from rural Mississippi, bringing neither money nor connections.

The first Hedermans, R.M. and T.M., went to p the story the next day in a typical front-page leadline: "Washington is Clean Again With Negro Trash Removed."

The Clarion-Ledger was perhaps the most acist major newspaper in the country. Over the years, its front page directed Mississippi readers to public lynchings and its columnists joked in print that scientists had found the cause of sichle-cell anemia—licking food stamps.

On April 19, the newspaper's morning headline hlared markedly different news: "Clarion-Ledger Wins Pulitzer Prize." The ironies were immense. The Mississippi newspaper that had become synonymous with Deep South racism had been awarded journalism's top honor for antagonist whose own weekly newspaper even-

- Race Riots

Across the street from the state capitol, the First Bappist Church became known as Jack-son's Taminismy Hall. Out of the pews of the church the Hedermans amounted governors like Ross Barriett, whose segregationist politics in-flamed race riots at the University of Mississippi in the early 1960s. Mr. Barnett, in turn, ap-pointed five Hedermans to state boards.

As late as the early 1970s, the race-baiting was almost as strong as it had been in the 1950s. So was the monopoly control of news in Jack-

In 1973, Rea Hederman, then 28 but already silver-baired, came home to change all that. He began recruiting bright, young reporters from around the country — most of them just out of college and most of them from the North.

"Rea's outside agitators," many of the locals called them, as did most of the seven other Hedermans who sat on the board of the 60,000-the move.

Investigative Stories

"Nobody had done an investigative story in Mississippi in almost a century," said Bob Zeller, who stayed four years and now works at the Long Beach, California, Press-Telegram. "It was like walking everyday into an apple orchard where no one bad ever picked an apple."

Mr. Hederman's Young Turks wrote about police brutality toward blacks in Jackson and chroniced the plight of poverty-stricken and hungry hlack farmers in the Mississippi Delta. They began winning national journalism awards: the George Polk Award, the Heywood Broun Award and then, in 1979, the Robert F. Kennedy Award for defending the underprivi-

Southern Gothic

"You have to understand the family," said Mr. Minor, a man who admired no Hederman, not even Rea, but nevertheless appreciated the Southern Gothie nature of the Hederman story. "It took a small miracle for them to choke down down a divorce and scandal."

After seven years of 16-hour days, Rea Hederman began showing up in the office less and less often.

"I started seeing him twice a week, then once a week, then every couple of weeks," said Rob-ert H. Gordon, whom Mr. Hederman had hired as managing editor. "Then one day he came in and told me, Tve lost a lot of blood downstairs [in the board room]. Now it's your turn.' "Mr. Gordon did not take him seriously. 'He flashed his smile at me and added, 'See you in a couple

That was early last year. No one at the Clarinn-Ledger has seen him or heard from him since. The divorce went through, his remarriage two months later. The staff heard he was living in New York. They heard reports of random spottings in Jackson. They began calling him Howard Hughes Hederman.

Behind the board room doors, the rest of the tightly knit family was beginning to unravel. Six mooths later, with the project on public schools only partly finished, the newsroom got its oext shock. But they waited - and were surprised. Gannett and the Clarion-Ledger's new editor, Charles Overby, backed them to the hill. Mr. Overby held the series until the eve of a special legislative session oo the education reforms in December, then deluged the reluctant legisla-tors with 51 stories and 27 editorials in 24 days.

The reforms passed. The Pulitzer was awarded, more Gannett's prize than Rea Hederman's by this time, although Mr. Overby gave Mr. Hederman half the credit.

But in Jackson, there are two newspapers that oo longer print race-baiting headlines. And scattered around the country are several hundred of Mr. Hederman's alumni, many working on major newspapers, who came of age with the Clarion-Ledger.

Johanna Neumann, a Berkeley graduate who oow is a national reporter in Gannett's Wash-ington bureau, was hired by Mr. Hederman in 1976. She vividly recalls driving across the Mississippi border with California license plates, feeling like an "outside agitator" and nervously looking over her shoulder to see who was following her.

Miss Neumann said Mr. Hederman changed nnt only the Clarion-Ledger but also the young reporters who went there.

Shaping Up: U.S. Army Makes Progress in Tailoring Good Soldiers, Sergeants

By Richard Halloran

New York Times Service FORT HOOD, Texas - Command Sergeant Major Ronald J. Hammer, the top noncommissioned officer at this sprawling army post, leaned across his desk and said, "I'm telling you, we are so dama much better today than we were a year ago."

In his small, wood-paneled office lined with the pictures, plaques and mementos of 33 years in the U.S. Army, Sergeant Major Hammer con-tinued, "We're better because we've eliminated so many problems that sucked up so much of Eliminating problems, he said, meant bringing into the army new soldiers "with the ability and the willingness to perform," training and keeping good young sergeants and getting rid of soldiers or sergeants who could not or would not measure up. . . . .

China Calls Vietnam Pullout a 'Swindle'

The Associated Press BEIJING — The People's Daily, China's leading newspaper, said Tuesday that a partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia is "another act in a hig swindle" and called for United Nations' supervision of a complete withdrawal.

The newspaper said Vietnam was "using a partial withdrawal to show its refusal to pull out completely." It called the pullout a challenge to the international community. China, which supports the Cambodian resistance movement, has called repeatedly for a complete Vietnamese pullout.

But the People's Daily added a new demand Tuesday: "With UN supervision and verifica-tion, a gradual pullout of Vietnamese troops with a definite time limit can be considered. Otherwise, a so-called partial troop withdrawal like that now being carried out by the Vietnamese authorities has no meanine."

Last July, the People's Daily said. Vietnam also announced a partial troop withdrawal, but it added more troops than it withdrew. "This was clearly shown when the Vietnamese concen-

Digital Gives European Managers More Freedom on Marketing

Digital Equipment Corp. is giving more leeway to its European subsidiaries in an effort to improve its marketing. In the past Digital, the second largest computer maker in the world,

"hasn't done the right job in marketing," in Europe, said Pier-Carlo Falonti, recently appointed vice president, European field operations. "We've never been marketeers," he added.

To better tailor its products and services to individual national markets, Digital is giving its country managers in Europe more freedom in such areas as pricing and marketing he said. In some countries Digital will adapt its products to the local language.

"My objective is to develop the most dynamic and responsive sales and service operation in the computer industry in Europe," said Mr. Falotti, whose new position makes him responsible for the sales and service operations of Digital's European subsidiaries. Assisting him is Michel Ferreboend, Digital's newly appointed European marketing manager. In 1982, Europe accounted for more than a quarter of Digital's sales of $3.88 billion. An Italian national, Mr. Falotti, 41, has a degree in electrical engineering and earned a Ph.D. from Harvard Business School. He joined Digital in 1969 as field service manager for Italy, and most recently served as head of service and support activities in Europe. In his new position, Mr. Falotti said, he will be based in Geneva and "partially on the airplane."

2 U.S. Magazines Escalate Battle Over 'Top 500' Lists

New York Times Service NEW YORK - Fortune and Forbes, the U.S. business biweeklies, have spent months compiling their annual "500" surveys of the largest U.S. companies. Now, as each publication sets about trying to convince business readers that its list is the best, the sparks are flying.

The annual competition for circulation and attention has always been boisterous, but this year the sparring between the two publications has es-

In full-page newspaper advertisements appear-ing last week, Forbes said: "Your money back if you don't agree. Forbes does more in one issue than Fortune does in two." Forbes is offering a refund of its $3 cover price to any dissatisfied cus-

Forbes concedes that its unusual refund offer was employed primarily to get attention and re-flects an old battle of semantics waged against its longtime rival. The Fortune 500, now in its 29th year, lists only the largest industrial companies in the United States, based on sales.

Forbes, which started its list in 1969, takes issue with the "industrial" qualification. The Forbes compilation, arranged by assets, profits and market value as well as sales, includes all companies. This June, in an apparent concession to the importance of the economy's service sector, Fortune will offer a "Service 500" — an expansion of its previous service rankings.

The Fortune 500, said James W. Michaels, editor of Forbes, in a preface to the Forbes 500 list, "assumes the only companies that count are those that run assembly lines. It's embarassing for Forune that its list of the supposedly most important companies doesn't include AT&T, Bank of America and many other giants."

Mr. Michaels' comments came as little surprise to William S. Rukeyser, Fortune's managing edi-sents more information more accessibly, and that the evidence is in that the business world continues to view Fortune's as the authoritative ranking of the business world."

Forbes grants the point, albeit grudgingly, "The Fortune 500 has worked its way into the lingos, and once something falls into the lingo of accepta-bility, it's hard to get it out," said Don Garson, Forbes's director of corporate communications.

At least in part, Forbes is concerned with selling more magazines: Last year, circulation of the Forbes 500 issue totaled 714,694, only 3,000 more than its average circulation per edition for 1982. Fortune, however, sold 705,383 "500" copies, 25,000 more than its average for the year.

But the battle of the 500s involves pride as much as circulation numbers, and the contest for acceptability is far from settled. Dow Jones & Co. will use the Forbes ranking this year for its news re-trieval service. But at Harvard University, Paula Barker Duffy, administrative director of external relations, requires both compilations for her work with corporations.

"I think the main advantage to Forbes is that it is more timely with respect to the service industry, but you have to separate those companies out from the industrials," Mrs. Duffy said. "It will turn out that for more comprehensive information in terms of just sheer information, Fortune will

As for the matter of $3 refunds, Forbes does not expect to have to grant many. "But I'm sure Mal-colm [Forbes]," the magazine's chairman, "is pre-pared to live with the result," Mr. Garson said.

company is considering a bid for est" in making an offer at price in Sotheby Parke Bernet, the auction house, at a price higher than that offered by Marshall S. Cogan and Stephen C. Swid, and has acquired a limited number of Sotheby's shares on the Stock Exchange.

But Mr. Cogan said Tuesday night, 10 hours after the possibility of a second offer was disclosed. that he and his partoer had already increased their holdings to more than 36.5 percent of the stock. He said that "it will be very difficult now for any third party to gain control, and a new offer would be a very heroic action."

Marcus Agius of Lazard Brothers, who identified himself as the London banker of the prospective bidder, refused to disclose its iden-tity but denied New York reports that it was Warner Communications, which showed some interest in Sotbeby's last year.

Mr. Agius described his client as "a sizeable American private com-pany, financially oriented, with no interests in either manufacturing or the arts."

He said the company would have to decide whether to make a bid no later than next Tuesday, the effecdve expiration date of the offer of almost $100 million made last month by Mr. Cogan and Mr. Swid through General Felt, the New Jersey company that they control, Technically, their offer expires in London tomorrow, but they are expected to extend it for six days to match the New York deadline, associates said.

Sotheby's board, which has fiercely opposed the General Felt bid, told shareholders Thesday that they "risk nothing" by waiting until May 10 to decide whether or not to accept the first offer. The board has been searching frantically for a "white knight" to top Mr. Cogan's and Mr. Swid's offer, and they be-lieve they have now found one; but Sotheby's officials conceded that a ing to $8.53 before they fell back. According to Mr. Agius, discussions about a second bid were held over the weekend in London and in New York. Sotheby's said it would be holding further meetings with the prospective buyer this week.

Mr. Cogan and Mr. Swid are free under British regulations as of tomorrow to buy more shares in the open market in addition to those tendered under the terms of their offer. Should they get 50 per cent, Mr. Agius said, "then quite obviously the game would be up."
But with the possibility of a higher offer in the air, Mr. Cogan said he was "not optimistie" about reaching that level quite yet. "In the long term, I'm relatively sanguine," the American said, "but these new developments make the situation hard to evaluate." Meanwhile, Lord Cockfield, the British trade minister, continued to delay a decision on whether to submit the proposed General Felt takeover to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, It was reported last week that the Office of Fair Trading recommended that he not do so, but his expected an-nouncement was not made Tuesday. A spokesman said it would not come until Wednesday or Thursday at the earliest,

China Membership Issue Faces Asian Development Bank Meeting

and industry expect ucemployment to continue to rise this year but to do so more slowly than in 1982. They expressed concern that protectionism might abort a weak economic recovery.

The Permanent Conference of European Community Chambers of Commerce and Industry said Tuesday in its annual report that companies at present do not believe that any economic revival would last long. In most countries covered by a conference survey, companies said they expect lower inflation to belp cut their production costs but that continuing high interest rates would ensure that new investments were kept to a minimum.

Respondents said they expect such investments in 1983 to aim mainly at reducing labor and energy costs rather than increasing production because existing spare capacity would be adequate to meet higher demand in the initial stages of an upturn. The survey covered more than 500 local chambers of commerce in all EC countries except Den-mark and Luxembourg. It also included Switzerland, Austria, Turkey and Spain. The report said some chambers of commerce in Britain, Spain and Italy were pressing for protection against competition from developing countries' exports.

The great majority of chambers covered by the survey were opposed to such protection and in favor of reducing trade barriers within Europe and between Europe and Third World countries, the

EC Offers Buffer Stock Plan For Sugar Trade Agreement

By Brij Khindaria

GENEVA - The European Community offered a plan Tuesday for a new International Sugar Agreement but at the same time made it clear that it will enter only on its own terms.

Michel Jacquor, the chief EC delegate, said the 10-nation community, the largest noncommunist sugar exporter, will again stay out of the planned agreement if it is oot more effective than the existing agreement.

EC Production Was Unchanged In February

LUXEMBOURG - lodustria production in the European Comproduction in the European Com-munity in February was unchanged from January, indicating that the decline io output in late 1982 has stabilized, the EC statistical agency Eurostat said Tuesday.

The agency's seasonally adjusted index of industrial production, which uses a 1975 base of 100. matched January's level of 111.2. However, that was 2.8 percent lower than in February 1982, Enrestat said.

This appears to confirm that there is a balt in the decline, which reached a minimum level at the cod of 1982," the agency said.

The 10-nation index fell 0.6 percent in December to 109.4, the seventh straight monthly decline and its lowest point since 1978. It then rebounded to the current level in January. Eurostat said output has edged up since December in three of the four biggest EEC countries — West Germany, France and Britain.

Our profits are very slightly up on 1981 – better than appeared possible at the balf year. Part of the improvement is naturally due to the recent weakening of the pound and part to the containment of unit costs. I believe shareholders will feel reasonably satisfied that the diverse activities of the RTZ Group have stood us in good stead during a very difficult year. Long term demand for metals

Long term demand for metals
Although the drop in demand for most metals has generally been much less than in 1974-75; this latest recession has been more prolonged than in any period since the early 1930s. Furthermore, this setback occurred after much slower growth than in the early 1970s; in some metals demand has never regained the heights then scaled.

Although the industrial countries now appear to be recovering, their demand for metals may not pick up as rapidly as in the past. Fabricators today emphasise materials conservation and miniaturisation. Substitution is a continuous and partly reversible process, but recent innovations may have hastened the switch from traditional methods.

These factors do not mean thet total demand for individual metals will decline over the next decade but average growth rates are likely to be slower than so far

Mining and the Third World

It has now become clear that large scale mines such as Bougainville are unlikely to be developed over the next few years. The decision not to proceed with the Cerro Colorado devalopment in Panama was takeo after considerable study and demnnstrates the problems involved for third world countries in developing new resources. International mining companies make a major contribution, emphasising the commercial realities of mineral development, by hringing together financial, technical and managerial expertise that these countries can seldom obtain elsewhere.

Their involvement greatly increases the likely success of new mineral devalopment with substantial economic benefits to the best countries.

to the host countries. Among these are higher overseas earnings, greater employment opportunities and a considerable injection of money into the economy. For local people there is the prospect of higher standards of living and greater opportunities for training, acquiring new skills and a wider education.

The Rio Tinto-Zinc Corporation PLC

The Outlook

There are mnunting indications that 1983's economic performance will improve on the year's earlier modest predictions. The road to an economic recovery that is broadly based enough to ensure a sustained improvement in metal prices remains strewn with potential obstacles, but at least the road now points in the right direction.

In anticipation of economic recovery, the LME prices of some metals, such as aluminium and copper, rose in January in sterling and dollar terms. Currency unrest and a spillover from speculation in precious metals contributed to the increases. Not all metals benefited and this emphasises the fragility of the revival. Prices are still at low levels in real terms, but historically and also relative to the costs of efficient mines.

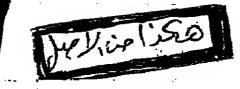

On the cost side, weakening nil prices could be beneficial; other costs are also likely to rise more slowly and lower interest rates will help reduce financing costs.
In short, the signals for profits may have changed to amber, but they are not yet green. We may well have to wait until 1984 before any worthwhile recovery in the world economy comes through to those of us who 66 THE Englishman's Daughter." a "page-turner." No good novel ever is, is not a "page-turner." No good novel ever is, if a book is worth anything at all, it makes you refuctant to turn the pages. It holds you, encourages you to hang around and relish a scene or mull over an idea.

Because it takes place in Moscow and concerns, among other things, the inner workings of Soviet intelligence agencies, "The Englishman's Daughter" will inevitably be compared to "Gorky Park." And this is not fair, for Evans, a former foreign correspondent, is good in ans, a former foreign correspondent, is good in his own particular way. While he doesn't quite capture the brooding darkness of Martin Cruz Smith's central character, he has more flair, more different flavors of irony. Like William Buckley Jr., Evans has a talent for intellectual conundrums and a special feeling for those places in politics where pathos and absurdity

"The Englishman's Danghter" contains at least nine good characters, which would be quite a feat for a so-called "serious" novel. These people of Evans's are capable of saying things like "only the innocerit or the insane confuse escape with freedom." Or "there is no greater fanalicism than a woman's prunence once aroused." Or "it is impossible to defend democracy democratically."

Child, one of the book's best characters, is an English "monetarist" who has gone over to Russia. The author says of him that he had "the look you see in out-of-season hotel dwellers." He adds that "a defector, like a nov-like the contract and inhabit, his elist or a rechise, must invent and inhabit his own world." And "like all defectors, Child knew that his usefulness diminished a little more each day."

When Evans's characters go to bed together, most of them behave convincingly, passonately and imaginatively. If we think of this for a moment, or of John le Carré's "The Little Drummer Girl," it is tempting to wonder whether we might not have to turn to thrillers

NEW YORK — Waking up the other day, I saw a headline: "Tide of Mediocrity' Imperils

'I thought it was the window of vulnerability that imperiled the U.S.," mumbled the brain.

What an idiot. Just a few days earlier I had told it the Scowcroft Commission, reporting to the president on nuclear business, had announced that the window of vuloerability did not exist. I reminded the brain of this while shampooing its container.

"Of course," it mused. "So now. without a window of vulnerability to justify buying $30-billion worth of new missiles, the government needs a new menace. Therefore: the tide of mediocrity. How many missiles do I think it will require to stem the tide of mediocrity?

What an imbecile. How did f know what it thought until it thought something?

"I just had a terrible thought," it thought something? mediocre grammarians they would "f just had a terrible thought," it said, "That tide of mediocrity that imperils the U.S. — that sounds like it could be us."

like it could be us." "If it is, it's all your fault," yelled. "How many times have I told you to cast out the mediocrity and buckle down to excellence?" Dripping water, we made a clos-er examination of the newspaper. First, a fuller reading of the headline: "Commission oo Education Warns 'Tide of Mediocrity' Imperils U.S." Then, bifocals in place, a study of the body type.

"Relax," I said. "It's not about us. It's about education."

A quick scan indicated that a federal commission of 18 learned folk was reporting that American schooling was poor and getting "The tide of mediocrity, man. Read to me about the tide of mediocrity," said the brain. I read: "The educational foundations of our society are presently being eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity that threatens our very future as a nation and as a people."

"That sentence shows how bad things are," it said. "If 18 learned folk are writing sentences as bouse. What a burden, having a mediocre as that, the tide of brain so arrogant it gives only a C

"Look," said the brain. "How much better it reads if we remove the pointless presently. Then we get foundations of our society are being eroded' instead of "are pres-ently being eroded."

What a nitpicker. "There's also a grammar error," it went on. "You can't say. by a rising tide of mediocrity that threatens our very future." Shut up, I suggested.

"Worse than that," it continued, "they have stuck in the most important part of their statement to wit, that the nation's future is threatened - as an afterthought in dangling nonrestrictive clause following their unexciting cliché about eroding foundations."

"This is twaddle unworthy of a mind that should be trying to rise above mediocrity." I growled.

"Exactly my point about this finit of the pen of 18 learned folk," it replied. "In scourging mediocrity in the schools they not only use trite cliches, they deaden their writing with superfluous words like presently, and very used as an unnecessary modifier of future, and betray an ignorance of the distinction between restrictive and conrestrictive clauses. They also bury their main point - the nation is in danger - so deep in the sentence at many people will go to sleep before reaching it."

No wonder that the tide of mediocrity is rising around my bouse. What a burden, having a mediocrity is already lapping at the to 18 of its betters,

The Vatican's Document Collection

Sale of Facsimiles Will Help Maintain Its Vast Library of Treasures

International Herald Tribune PARIS — The Vatican Library is a treasure house of maps and codices, manuscripts and incunabula. Many documents are falling to dust, most of them are invisible except to selected scholars. Now, thanks to the latest printing techniques, including the use of scanners and lasers, some of the library's treasures are being reproduced.

The facsimiles will be sold and one example of each work will be given to the Vatican. The originals will then be locked away, con-

The originals will then be locked away, consigned to eternal safety.

The books are being published by seven publishers representing France, West Germaoy, the United States, Italy, Japan, Sweden and Spain, The first public view of the works printed so far will be at UNESCO in Paris May 9-16. The opening will be attended by the cardinal-arcbbishop of Paris, the chief rabbi, and the inevitable Jack Lang.

The publishers' first efforts include facsimiles of the "Cosmographia Clandins Ptoiles of the "Cosmographia Claudius Pto-lemaeus," a 15th-century cartographic collec-tion that goes back to Ptolemy's map of the second century; a volume of poems by Mi-chelangelo; the coder Benedictus; a 15thcentury Italian book of bours, and the writings of Martin Luther.

The publishers have a 20-year contract with the Vatican, which will receive a royalty of 10 percent of the selling price of each vol-ume. The Ptolemaens will sell for $10,000.

The Vatican is expected to use the considerable proceeds to build a new, modern library. When it is built, no one will have access to the old reading room except the pope and people designated by him. Each book is stamped by the Vatican Library and signed by the library's prefect and the plates will be destroyed at the end of the print run.

Edicions will be limited to 500 or 600 copies, depending on the results of market re-search. Despite the high prices and the small printings, it should be a very profitable ven-ture, according to Daniel Boyer, an Ameri-can who is handling French-language distri-bution of the books. bution of the books.

"The Japanese are buying in large quanti-ties as an investment," Boyer said. "They have formed a business clob and they pay in advance for anything we publish from now to the year 2000."

Although they may prove to be an attractive investment, the books, which will start coming out later this year, are intended mainly for libraries and universities. The titles to be reproduced are chosen by the seven pub-

Gold leaf, of which there is a great deal, is applied to each page by hand. Blue, of which there is also a great deal, is the hardest color to reproduce. The books' bindings are laboriously made by hand to imitate the originals as precisely as possible.

"The laser and scanner technology is oot new," Boyer said. "What we have done is combine this technology with arrisan work to produce excellent quality."

It took three years simply to develop paper that resembled the original, can stand up to modern printing techniques, and is durable. "The paper is especially made to last 500 years because the originals will be put on ice," Boyer said.

To be reproduced, each page must be removed from its binding and placed in a metal scholar are engaged in a terrific dispute over cylinder. The value of the originals is almost one volume. The publishers are trying to be inestimable. "The ones that went to New York for the Vatican Treasures exhibition have to print two versions," Boyer said.

Not all the Varican's Library's contents will be reproduced. Many documents are too fragile, others are unsuitable. One category the publishers have rejected is big Bibles.

"They're too big and we don't believe very much that we should go into the Bible business." Boyer said. "We don't want to be religious publishers."

All the books and maps that the group publishes will be beautiful; almost none will be comprehensible to the lay public. Each book will, however, be accompanied by a long commentary by a modern scholar, a process that has proved as trying as the application of gold leaf.

"Sometimes the scholars disagree," Boyer said. "They don't disagree, they fight," said his wife.

One firentan was treated for smoke inhalation, said Garry Adams, chief of the Roxbury fire department. Adams, said the 10. department. Adams said the 10-room house, purchased by Miller in 1957, sustained "between $50,000 and $100,000 in damages." The 67-year-old playwright and his wife, Inge Morath, are in Beijing where he is directing his play "Death of a Salesman." Miller has been in China for about six weeks.

The son of the exiled Argentine writer Jacobo Thmerman was sentenced to a second jail term for refusing to serve with the Israeli Army in Lebanon, an anti-war group said. Daniel Timerman, 35, University at Malibu, California who served a 28-day sentence in October for disobeying an order to accompany his reserve unit into ion, was sentenced to 35 days in jail by a military court. The "There is a Limit" group, made up of reservists opposed to the war, said Timerman was sent to military prison after he again refused to go to Lebanon. Timerman's father is the author of "The Longest War," a book sharply critical of the June 6 invasion of Lebanon. The elder Timerman, a former newspaper publisher, was expelled from Ar-

scatina in 1979 after being jailed
